CEO Statement

Mr. VINOD KUMAR

Technical Architect

"You are valuable to Me and the Organization". When people know their value, they strive to become more valuable. Many workers have become disengaged and discontented because they feel as if their work does not matter. The CEO can go a long way in helping their employees feel valuable by telling them that they value them. If a leader does not value their people, their people then find a place that does value them.

Statements have meaning. What the leaders say is some of the most important statements that can be made in any organization. Every employee of each company wants their CEO to say these statements to them frequently. And when they do, the employee will have a different perspective on their work and for the leader that they work for.
